Hi,

Looking to purchase the corresponding stand for my Tuck and Roll PA.

Please email.

jae2006@msn.com

Thanks

Very tough and even tougher are the knobs to hold the stand to the head. I have a stand that is the 2 piece stand and one side is nice and the other side is all rusty that I picked up for my K400 and I am going to have to make the connector piece for the bottom rear and have it all blasted and most likely powder coat it black.

It cost me 60.00 and I am going to have at least that if not more into making it usable and I still don't have the proper knobs to hold it to the head.

I have a Cascade A5 head (22xxx) that did not come with the stand mounts. I thought the stands started with the B series heads. As Bart says they are hard to find and the knob bolts are even harder tho a usable substitute can be made.
