As an a big creedence, fan I ve got an old 200 A-4 head and a 2 x15 cab. I ve got some questions..

1: Why did Fogerty use two similar amp heads on stage? Was it only for backup if it was something wrong with one of them?

2: I know that Fogerty used the A version of the 200 amp. But I can`t see the fuses in the front witch I`ve got. Do I got an older model of the 200? When did they switch over to fuses on the backside of the amp?

3:I`ve also got two jbl d130f, but they need to be reconed. Is it worth the the money or do you recomend to buy something new. What will you then recomend? Is there a good speaker that comes up to the old jbl d130f. example Jensens c15n?

hope somebody can help me. Thanks for a good website. Sorry my bad english.

Most have the fuse in back or inside the amp. I remember a fella I played with once back in the day that had a 100 with the fuses in the front. I have seen one other 200 head that way and thats all.

Sorry, I had some wrong information about my amp. I thought it was fuses that was in the front of the amp. But there are two white "knobs" saying: speaker overload and power overload.

Those are the fuses. That is one famous amp. Probably the most famous amp in all of Kustom Rock history. Sheryl Crowe is making a stab at that though right now.

There are several famous Kountry music Kustom amps. I have one Kustom amp that I think is probably a bit of unknown but still slightly famous Southern Rock Kustom amp.
