Who are these clowns that come on here, have nothing to say but clog up these threads? What do they want and how can they be stopped?

They have been here before. Maybe not the same idiots, but the same spam. I believe that these are computer based systems that can automatically sign up and post on forums. That's why there are so many of the "type in the characters" sign up forms now.

The administrator needs to remove the posts and ban the poster from the board.

I must be special. I get the email notifications when new posts arrive, and it's been a very long time when I saw a post that wasn't legit. Maybe they're getting deleted before the email notifications go out. Are you guys responding to the emails, or just checking the boards manually on the web?

I just read the boards. I know there is a response but I just delete it and then check the board.
